Netgear RBK53 (1 router + 2 satellite) for a 10,000 square feet gym (open space)?
2020/02/04

Hi to all.I could not find any similar thread, so I open a new one.A close friend of mine is going to open a gym in a big warehouse of 160 x 65 feet (10,000 square feet). There are no walls or columns inside, it's totally empty.The shape of the warehouse is a parallelepiped of 160 x 65 x 13 feet with on top the roof, which has the pitches running along the longest sides and merging at the center of the short side, where the height is 23 feet (13 of the box + 10 of the roof).We come up with the idea of using a meshed wifi Netgear RBK53 (1 router + 2 access points). The plan is to put them 1 meter below the highest point of the roof, along the longest side, having each of the router/satellites each 55 feet.There should not be more than 10 devices (tablet, pc, notebook) at the same time.There are now two questions coming to my mind:1) Would it be sufficient to cover the entire warehouse counting that there are no walls inside?2) How to efficiently and safety fix the routers and the satellites 1 meter below the roof? Are there kit or structures for doing this? We can't use an iron support since otherwise we will reduce the coverage I believe. Am I right?Thank you.
