MIMO Antenna Placement in Condominiums

2019/07/07

Hello everyone. I want some advice regarding placement and positioning a MIMO antenna. I will be moving out soon and I visited my new place yesterday. I'm using a 4G wireless modem (Huawei B315s-936) and upon checking the signal in the unit (I live in the Philippines by the way) my phone is having hard time getting a stable 4G signal. I want to plan out my antenna placement before moving in as I will be needing my internet connection for home based work. The condominium unit is on the 2nd floor and I have a panel type directional MIMO that's connected in my modem. I don't have a roof access so my only choice is to position the antenna outside the window. I used the OpenSignal to map the closest cell tower and it is between 250-350 meters from the unit. These are my questions: 1. Is the 2nd floor unit high enough to receive signal from the signal tower? 2. Should I face the panel 90 degrees or 45 degrees? 3. There's a building between my antenna and the signal tower (3rd tower of the condo). Will the obstruction affect the signal quality? Thanks and more power.
